OUR PROGRAMS

We believe that an informed, educated and engaged citizenry is essential to the functioning of democratic society. Our Nonfiction Program supports this by advancing excellent long form reporting, supporting deeply reported nonfiction about the most pressing issues of the day—and then helping to disseminate it on a variety of media platforms to the widest possible audience.

The Sustainable Communities program supports the development of community-scale policy, practice and leadership innovations that address global climate change resiliency and sustainability goals while enhancing the health of local economic, social and ecological systems. It consists of the Community Partnership Program, the Helderberg Brewery & Incubator and the Hill & Mountain Farming Project.

Our program in Education aims to improve education performance such that all students graduate from K-12 college and career ready and better prepared to succeed, by providing a safe and inspiring environment where educators, policy makers students and other stakeholders can come together to learn, connect, collaborate and share. We will improve the quality, quantity and retention of teachers by creating and providing high quality professional development opportunities for teachers.

Our Art and Music Program provides an ideal residential setting where groups of artists, musicians and performers can come together to learn, connect, collaborate and share. We provide an inspiring, distraction free space in nature where groups can learn, create, rehearse, record and perform. We bring together artists from all over the world to participate in immersive, highly productive, creative residencies.

OUR APPROACH

The Carey Institute works with local and international partners to achieve our mission. Through residencies and programs we focus on the most pressing social, political, economic and other issues of the day from agriculture and sustainable communities, to humanitarian relief and sustainable development, child rights and education, adolescent girls and women's rights, art and music. We provide an inspiring reflective space where networks of academics, practitioners, community based organizations and policy makers can come together to propose solution to the most pressing issue and provide capacity building to the next generation of practitioners.
